

ALGARVE 63.

A fine quality hardback photo book, showing images of times past.

The sixty three iconic black and white photographs by Tim Motion, photographer and artist, who lived in Algarve from 1962 to 1975, recall life and the people of Algarve from the early 1960s and post-revolution to 1978.

Gossip

Tavira 1963

I arrived in Algarve in December 1962, where I met the only foreigners resident in Praia do Carvoeiro, Claude Bourgier and his wife Marie and the Swift family. David Wight, the deaf South African poet, was staying with them at the time.

These photographs were taken originally for the book “Algarve – a portrait and a guide”, by Patrick Swift and David Wright, published in 1965 by Barry and Rockliff, London. The book is a ‘must read’ if you want an amusing account of life in Algarve before tourism. It can be found online at ‘bibliofile’, ‘abebooks’ or maybe Amazon. Not only did I have a Leica camera but I also had a car, which facilitated our expeditions throughout Algarve, visiting its restaurants, bars, churches, beaches, wine makers, markets and gipsy mule and horse fairs. After having been published in the book, my negatives remained rolled up in the processor’s boxes for forty years. In 2015 I was approached by Nuno Loureiro of ENFOLA in Lagoa with a proposal for a book and an exhibition. I am very pleased to say that the result is this historic photo book.
